8 Reading G

A:Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions.

One of the biggest mistakes parents can make is to take their child's behavior personally. The truth is, you should never fall into that trap because the teenager next door is doing the same thing to his parents, and your cousin's daughter is doing the same thing to her parents.

Your role is to just deal with your child's behavior as objectively as possible (with an open mind). When parents don't have effective ways to deal with these kinds of things, they may feel out of control and get scared—and often overreact or under react to the situation.

When they overreact, they become too rigid (hard), and when they under react, they ignore the behavior or tell themselves it's —just a phase. Either way, it won't help your child learn to manage his thoughts or emotions more effectively, and be more respectful.

Understand that if you haven't been able to intervene early with your kids, you can start at any time. Even if your child is constantly exhibiting disrespectful behavior, you can begin stepping in and setting those clear limits. And kids really do want limits, even if they protest loudly—and they will.

The message that they get when you step in and set limits is that they're cared about, they're loved and that you really want them to be successful and able to function well in the world. Our kids won't thank us now, but that's okay—it's not about getting them to thank us, it's about doing the right thing.

B:Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions.

First language, also known as mother tongue, is generally the language a person learns first. However, one can have two or more native languages thus being a native bilingual or indeed multilingual. The order in which these languages are learned is not necessarily the order of proficiency. Incomplete first language skills often make learning other languages difficult. Often a child learns the basics of his or her first language or languages from his or her family. The term mother tongue, however, should not be interpreted to mean that it is the language of one's mother. For instance, in some paternal societies, the wife moves in with the husband and thus may have a different first language or dialect than the local language of the husband. Yet their children usually only speak their local language.

43) One can have more than one mother tongue.

a) True b) False

44) Speakers learn the basic of language at their early age.

a) True b) False

45) If someone doesn't learn their mother tongue well, he will have problem learning other languages.
