H. Read the passage below and answer the following questions. (3.5)

Several general changes occur in the human body as it ages: hearing and vision become weak, muscle strength becomes less, soft tissues such as skin and blood vessels become less flexible, and there is a general decrease in body power.

Most of the body's organs perform less efficiently with advancing age. For example, the average amount of blood pumped by the heart drops from about 6.9 liters per minute at age 20 to only 3.5 liters pumped per minute at age 85. For this same age range, the average amount of blood flowing through the kidneys drops from about 0.6 liters per minute to 0.3 liters. Not all people experience decreased organ function to the same degree. Some individuals have healthier heart and kidneys at age 85 than others do at age 50.

The immune system also changes with age. A healthy immune system protects the body against bacteria, viruses, and other harmful agents by producing disease-fighting protein known as antibodies. A healthy immune system also prevents the growth of unusual cells, which can become cancerous. With advancing age, the ability of the immune system to perform these protective functions is decreased. The rate of antibody production may decrease by as much as 80 percent between age 20 and age 85. This less-effective immune system explains why an attack of influenza, which may make a young adult sick for a few days, can be deadly for an old person.

Thus it is as good for an older person to be vaccinated against the flu and pneumonia as it is for young people to be vaccinated against childhood diseases.
