Energy is ability to do work. It can take a variety of forms: Mechanical, electrical, chemical, and nuclear. To produce any type of energy, the resources of the earth are used. The main resources of the earth are fossil fuels such as gas, oil, and coal.

We get most of our energy from these fossil fuels, but this is harmful to the environment. Fossil fuels are nonrenewable and cannot be replaced easily. Once we use the up, they are gone forever. They are not clean as they pollute water or air.

In recent years, scientists try to use other types of energy resources. They call them clean energy resources because they do not pollute the earth. Clean energy is renewable. It is made from resources that can be replaced like wind, water, sunshine, tides and plants. When renewable energy resources are used, the demand for fossil fuels is reduced.

The most common type of clean energy is the solar power. Solar energy is produced by the radiation that reaches the earth. People have used the sun as a heat source for thousands of years. Nowadays, solar energy can be changed into other forms of energy, such as heat and electricity. Therefore, fewer fossil fuels are consumed each year and they are saved for the future generation.

1 One custom to reflect people's history and values is the way they greet each other. There is a wide range of greetings around the world. These range from the common handshake to other strange customs in some countries. Let's take a look at how the simple action of greeting someone varies greatly from place to place.

2 In the United States and Canada, for example, simple handshake or nod (moving your head up and down) is the norm. The handshake has an interesting origin: It started long ago as a way of showing people that you weren't carrying a weapon (eg. a knife or gun). Shaking the person's right hand while looking him or her in the eye is the usual method. Handshakes are also common in other parts of the world, including Britain and Russia. In Russia, men grasp other men's hands very strongly during the handshake. In New Zealand people also greet each other with a handshake. However, the native Maori people of that country display more physical contact; they press their noses together as a sign of trust and closeness.

3 In other countries, such as France and Belgium, hugging and kissing are more common when two people meet. In those cultures, people kiss each other on the cheeks. The number of times varies depending on the particular country. In Saudi Arabia, men might hug and kiss each other (but not a woman) on the cheek. Men will also shake hands with other men there. In some Eastern countries, including Korea and Japan, bowing is the traditional greeting. In Japan, if your bow is deeper, you show deeper respect. The strangest custom, however, is likely in Tibet. People there choose to stick out tongue to greet others.
